COOKIE POLICY

Cookies are small text strings stored on the user's computer when certain pages on the Internet are visited. The software applications used may contain 'cookie' technology. Cookies primarily serve to make browsing easier for the user. Cookies may provide information on browsing within the Website and enable certain services that require the user's path through different pages of the Website to be identified. For every access to the portal, regardless of whether a cookie is present, the browser type, operating system (e.g. Microsoft, Apple, Android, Linux, etc.), the visitor's host and referring URL are recorded, together with data on the requested page. Users can nevertheless configure their browser to be notified when they receive a cookie and decide to delete it. Further information on cookies is available on browser providers' websites.

Types of cookies used

No personal data relating to users are intentionally acquired by the website.

Cookies are not used to transmit information of a personal nature, nor are persistent cookies of any kind, or systems for tracking users, used.

The use of session cookies (which are not stored persistently on the user's computer and disappear when the browser is closed) is strictly limited to transmitting session identifiers (consisting of random numbers generated by the server) necessary to allow safe and efficient browsing of the website. The session cookies used on this website avoid the use of other IT techniques that could potentially compromise the confidentiality of users' browsing and do not allow the acquisition of personal data identifying the user. Apart from what is specified for 'browsing data' (for 'cookies'), the provision of data by users is entirely optional. Failure to provide such data may only make it impossible for users to obtain what they have requested.

The Controller accepts no responsibility for the content and materials accessible on those websites or otherwise obtainable through them. Any enquiries relating to the websites referred to by links must be addressed solely to the administrators of those websites.
